Actual Non-Compete Agreements from Pratt's Stats®

A non-compete clause or covenant not to compete is an agreement with the selling party not to compete with the purchaser, usually for a certain period of time and usually in a specified geographic area. These agreements with key personnel could have either a positive or adverse effect on value depending on the relationship between the cost and the value to the company.

The Pratt's Stats® database has non-compete information (months of agreement, description, and dollar value attributed to the agreement) on over 5,500 transactions. The following are real-world examples of non-compete agreements that can be found in the Pratt's Stats® database:
