Search default is Boolean logic. Please note that the default search in BVResearch Pro is the Boolean operator, “AND”. When searching for a specific phrase, you should include quotation marks around the phrase in order to only return documents that contain the specified phrase. Boolean operators (e.g. AND, NOT, OR) can be used in conjunction with phrases, as long as quotation marks are used to separate phrases. If no quotation marks are used around a group of words, the search engine will assume an AND should have been placed between each word.

Examples:

- “minority discount”— will return only those documents that have the specific phrase “minority discount”
- minority discount— will return all documents that contain the word “minority” and the word “discount”
- “minority discount” NOT “restricted stock”—will return all documents that have the specific phrase “minority discount,” but do not contain the specific phrase “restricted stock”

Narrow your search. You can narrow your search by “Article Collection.” This means that the article or content was originally published in one of the “Article Collections” below.
